

From: R. Mnemon <r.mnemon@door.transit> · Insight & Integration Subsection
To: P. Vorrash <p.vorrash@door.transit>
Date: this cycle, far too late
Subject: re: re: re: the Q3 carryover problem

Pell...

It's not their fault. It's a fundamental problem of the structure of reality. We hand them the real insights and they take "be present" or "we are all connected"... They set it somewhere with good light and never touch it again. It comes back next cycle, unopened, still in its wrapper, and we issue it to the next soul, who will keep it just as carefully, and use it just as little.

And here is the part frustrates me, Pell: it is never hidden from view. It sits right there the whole time. They look straight at it, earnest and focused, and that is exactly why they miss the point; some things only show themselves when you look beyond them. Stare at the surface of the lake and you will never see the treasure underneath.

I've stopped waiting for the department to mend this. Lately I'm trying something a little unorthodox (nothing that would get me in trouble, I promise). I'll say no more over here.

— R.

PS: Do you know how to use our colour printer?

From: P. Vorrash
Subject: re: re: the Q3 carryover problem
Remy — three aeons here, and not once a thank-you. Nine million realisations issued last quarter. Only forty-two of them returned marked "integrated". Forty-two. And I've followed that trend over centuries; it does not improve.

Bin 4 is over again — four hundred "be present"s. I have stopped blaming the souls.

From: R. Mnemon
Subject: re: the Q3 carryover problem
I checked the logs and requested a trace of the problem. It came back stamped: "Insight noted. No action available." They don't seem to manage a stable fix.

From: P. Vorrash
Subject: the Q3 carryover problem
Flagging for your subsection: carryover down again. They leave with the words and none of the weight. Management files it under "within tolerance". I have eleven thousand of these reports.

